Biodegradation is the disintegration of organic materials by bacteria or other biological means.

It is associated with environmentally friendly take away packaging products like these cups that are capable of decomposing back into natural elements when they have composting conditions.

The secret is the liner of the cup, with many mainstream double walled paper cups this is a plastic substance whereas with these cups the lining is actually corn starch; thus, they are safe to use and eco-friendly to the environment as well.

These 10oz paper cups are double walled providing extra insulation
10oz capacity.
